Q: How to turn audio down when changing the volume of the system? I'm on a 16.04. The volume applet works fine, but I would like to also listen to the audio on my laptop (instead of just the system volume) when the volume is changed. In 16.04, the volume applet does not show the mute icon (also in the properties of the volume control), but the change in volume is not picked up by my laptop. If I turn it off, I can't turn it on again. Is there a way to configure this, so that I can hear the sounds from my laptop as well as the sound from the rest of the system when the volume is changed? I would prefer to use a solution that does not require changing the configuration of the sound settings panel applet, but it is OK if it means only having to use the volume applet. A: Firstly, in Ubuntu 16.04 there are no applets for muting or changing volume. As a general rule, in Ubuntu you can only do one thing at a time, so instead you have to mute and then change the volume. Secondly, to mute your speakers when using the terminal, use the command `amixer -D pulse set Master muted`. Then to turn your volume back up again, use `amixer -D pulse set Master unmuted`.
